

Common Front for Social Justice Inc.

Annual income of N.B. social welfare recipients in 2009, for four categories of beneficiaries, compared to the average for the Atlantic Provinces<sup>1</sup>

Category of beneficiaries	Source of income in N.B.	Amount allocated in N.B. <sup>2</sup>	Atlantic average	Amount of raise needed	Percent raise needed in N.B.
1. Single employable person <sup>3</sup>	Basic social assistance	$6,444	$6,826	$382	5.9%
	Benefits and credits <sup>4</sup>	$245	$561	- <sup>4</sup>	-
2. Person with a disability	Basic social assistance	$7,416	$8,312	$896	12.1%
	Benefits and credits	$1,249	$1,201	-	-
3. Lone parent with one child	Basic social assistance	$9,708	$10,719	$1,011	10.4%
	Benefits and credits	$6,463	$6,029	-	-
4. Couple with two children	Basic social assistance	$10,896	$13,200	$2,304	21.1%
	Benefits and credits	$8,879	$8,582	-	-

Note : In 2009, the total income of a single employable person (or one in the transitional category) on social assistance only reached 43.0% of the low income cut-off (LICO); a handicapped person reached 55.6% of LICO, a lone parent with one child reached 83.5% of LICO and a couple with two children reached 67.1% of LICO.

<sup>1</sup> National Council of Welfare. 2010. Welfare Incomes 2009, Volume 129, Appendix A5. The total income for social welfare recipients comprises: (a) basic social assistance; (b) additional social assistance program benefits; (c) federal child benefits; (d) provincial child benefits; (e) GST credits and (f) provincial tax credits.

<sup>2</sup> N.B. social welfare rates have not been increased since 2009.

<sup>3</sup> Since January 2010, people in the "Single Employable Category" were transferred to the "Transitional Assistance Program" so the calculations in this table are made with the welfare rate of $537 for one person in the Transitional Assistance Program.

<sup>4</sup> Includes federal child benefits, provincial child benefits, GST credits, provincial tax credits and additional social assistance benefits.